Williamsport residents will be polled this week by C. W. Hays, resident of the village to learn opinions on the proposed program to install a waterworks, storm and sanitary sewer systems.

Mayor William D. Radcliff said approximately 50 representative taxpayers of the village attended a meeting Monday night in the township building to hear the program outlined.

Williamsport's share of the program would necessitate the issuance of $20,000 worth of municipal bonds, Mayor Radcliff said, and $20,000 worth of revenue bonds on the waterworks. A special election would be necessary for the bond issue. The project would be listed with W. P. A.

Mayor Radcliff said the majority of those attending the Monday night meeting seemed in favor of the program. A representative from a Columbus engineering firm attended the community meeting.

W. Knutson, R. Minn., were among the 50 house members who voted "no."

Washington was a different picture today than it was on April 6, 1917. Today the talk was of peace and of legislation to keep the nation out of war; then it was of the message which President Wilson had read to congress four days earlier asking that war be declared on Germany.

5,000 Soldiers to March

Only reminder today of war was the Army Day parade. Five thousand men, regulars, reserves and national guard, will march down Constitution avenue past President Roosevelt's reviewing stand. Tonight, the 26 living congressmen who voted against declaring war will meet at an informal dinner. The president's wife goes on the air with a nation-wide appeal for peace.

Many dramatic moments were packed into the four days between the time congress assembled in special session at the call of President Wilson and the day he signed the proclamation.

It was after dark on April 2 before congress was organized and ready to hear the president. Crowds lined Pennsylvania avenue between the White House and capitol hill. More people were in front of the White House.

Shortly before 8 p. m. Mr. Wilson started for capitol hill. Two squadrons of cavalry preceded his car.

Just before he was ushered in, Jeanette Rankin of Montana, first woman member of congress, appeared on the floor of the house amid cheers. Her vote against war already was assured.

Even before the president began to speak, word flashed over cable wires that another American ship, the Aztec, had been sunk by a German submarine.

House Chamber Still

There was silence as he spoke. He seemed to weigh each word and uttered each distinctly. He could be heard clearly in every part of the house chamber.

Toward the end of his speech, Mr. Wilson summed up:

The ships and peoples of other neutral and friendly nations have been sunk and overwhelmed in the same way (as ours). The challenge is to all mankind.

"There is one choice we cannot make, we are incapable of making; we will not choose the path of submission"—but the rest of (Continued on Page Eight.)

GOTHAM SPEEDS HUNT FOR YOUNG DEATH SUSPECT

Valentine Takes Charge of Beekman Hill Case, With Sculptor Named

MRS. KUDNER GUARDED

Police Fear Attack on Gedeon Girl's Sister

NEW YORK, April 6.—(UP)—Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine today personally directed the manhunt for Robert Irwin, the 29-year-old sculptor, he charged with the Beekman hill triple murder.

The search centered near the home of Mrs. Ethel Gedeon Kudner, sister of Veronica Gedeon, artist model killed Easter Sunday with her mother, Mary, and Frank Byrnes, a lodger.

Another Murder Feared

Valentine said he feared that Irwin, a former divinity student and once an inmate of an insane asylum, might try to murder Mrs. Kudner and then take his own life.

With photographs and a thumbnail description of Irwin, all of the city's 1,950 detectives were told to concentrate on the case to the exclusion of all but essential duties.

Daylong squads went through bowery lodgings, cheap rooming houses and the haunts of neurotics.

Valentine said that despite many reports of Irwin having been seen in various other cities in the east that he was certain the suspect still was within the New York city limits.

Charged With Crime

The commissioner and other ranking police heads charged the crime against Irwin, advancing as the motive the fact that Miss Gedeon and her mother broke up a romance between Irwin and Mrs. Kudner before the latter married Joseph Kudner.

The two women were strangled and Byrnes was stabbed to death. Police authorities, still believing Irwin might turn up at the Kudner apartment house, stationed picked detectives around it and persuaded Mrs. Kudner to move to a less accessible apartment.

NEW YORK BAR LEADER SCORES COURT REVISION

Burlingham said that he could "think of only one other attorney rather than condone or have any general—whom I will not name—who would not have resigned part or lot in such a shabby enterprise" as the court bill.

Addressing the committee as "an old fashioned lawyer," the New York attorney said that as an admirer of the president he could not refrain from saying that Mr. Roosevelt "has made a great blunder" and should retrace his steps.

He urged a constitutional amendment for compulsory retirement of justices such as the amendment proposed by Sen. Edward R. Burke, D., Neb., court plan foe.

Shot; Not Shot

ERROL FLYNN

BARCELONA, Spain, April 6.—(UP)—It seems there was a slight misunderstanding over Movie Star Errol Flynn's clash with a machine gun on the Madrid front. He shot a machine gun instead of being shot by one. Friends of the actor asserted at Madrid that he was "slightly wounded" by a machine gun bullet. Flynn, taking off here for Paris yesterday, said that he visited the Madrid "front" and shot a machine gun there. No wound was visible on him.

Wireless messages from the Pei-An were intercepted by the Globe wireless.

The master of the Pei-An expressed a need for fighting craft rather than merchantmen to come to his aid. There was no indication that pirate craft had been sighted, but the master apparently feared the Pei-An's helplessness soon would be discovered and the ship boarded.

PILOT SEES NO SIGNS OF LIFE NEAR HUGE SHIP

Major Smith, T. W. A. Chief, Reports Douglas on Mount Baldy

POSSES ORGANIZED

Six Passengers and Two Flyers Feared Dead

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 6.—(UP)—Major A. D. Smith, T. W. A. division superintendent, reported by radio from his plane today that he had sighted wreckage of the missing Douglas transport on a wooded slope on Mt. Baldy, near McNary, Arizona.

Major Smith radioed that the plane, missing since Saturday on a flight from Burbank, Cal., to New York on consignment to a European line, apparently had crashed. He was circling and maneuvering around the 11,000-foot peak trying to get low enough to determine the fate of the eight persons aboard the ship.

Landing Impossible

The T. W. A. official said he could not make a landing near the wreckage. Major Smith said he could determine no sign of life. Sheriff John Nunn at Springerville, Ariz., was notified and was expected to lead a posse of lumberjacks and mountain folk toward the wreckage.

Mt. Baldy is about 50 miles from the New Mexico border in rugged country interspersed with jagged mountain peaks and snow-filled valleys.

Airport officials said Major Smith informed them that it might be many hours before searchers could reach the wreckage and determine definitely whether any of the eight persons aboard had survived.

The plane, new twin-motored ship, was built for the Dutch KLM airlines.

Glen Moser, 30, chief pilot for Douglas airlines, and Joe Wolf, 32, co-pilot and navigator, were at the controls. They carried six passengers: Mr. and Mrs. Merl Estey, a Douglas engineer and his wife; Mrs. B. B. Broderick, mother of a Douglas engineer; E. R. Moser, 55, the pilot's father; Bernard Tray, Santa Monica parking station operator, and George Kent.

This area is desolate and largely uninhabited. There are jagged mountains, steep, wooded slopes and ravines where the snow is eight feet deep. Mount Baldy rises 11,000 feet near Greer, Arizona.

GAS EXPLOSION WRECKS TEXAS HOTEL; 4 HURT

The blast, much in the manner of the New London school disaster March 18, blew the roof from the building and caved in the walls of the one-story structure. All persons within the building were believed accounted for.

Officers investigating the explosion theorized that an open gas jet under Reynolds' bed was responsible for the gas accumulation. The gas ignited when he struck a match, Reynolds said.

ERROL FLYNN

BARCELONA, Spain, April 6.—(UP)—It seems there was a slight misunderstanding over Movie Star Errol Flynn's clash with a machine gun on the Madrid front. ## PILOT SEES NO SIGNS OF LIFE NEAR HUGE SHIP

Major Smith, T. W. A. Chief, Reports Douglas on Mount Baldy

POSSES ORGANIZED

Six Passengers and Two Flyers Feared Dead

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 6.—(UP)—Major A. D. Smith, T. W. A. division superintendent, reported by radio from his plane today that he had sighted wreckage of the missing Douglas transport on a wooded slope on Mt. Baldy, near McNary, Arizona.

Major Smith radioed that the plane, missing since Saturday on a flight from Burbank, Cal., to New York on consignment to a European line, apparently had crashed. He was circling and maneuvering around the 11,000-foot peak trying to get low enough to determine the fate of the eight persons aboard the ship.

Landing Impossible

The T. W. A. official said he could not make a landing near the wreckage. Major Smith said he could determine no sign of life.

Sheriff John Nunn at Springerville, Ariz., was notified and was expected to lead a posse of lumberjacks and mountain folk toward the wreckage.

Mt. Baldy is about 50 miles from the New Mexico border in rugged country interspersed with jagged mountain peaks and snow-filled valleys.

Airport officials said Major Smith informed them that it might be many hours before searchers could reach the wreckage and determine definitely whether any of the eight persons aboard had survived.

The plane, new twin-motored ship, was built for the Dutch KLM airlines.

Glen Moser, 30, chief pilot for Douglas airlines, and Joe Wolf-fole, 32, co-pilot and navigator, were at the controls. They carried six passengers: Mr. and Mrs. Merl Estey, a Douglas engineer and his wife; Mrs. B. B. Bronderlin, mother of a Douglas engineer; E. R. Moser, 55, the pilot's father; Bernard Tray, Santa Monica parking station operator, and George Kent.

This area is desolate and largely uninhabited. There are jagged mountains, steep, wooded slopes and ravines where the snow is eight feet deep. Mount Baldy rises 11,000 feet near Greer, Arizona.

GAS EXPLOSION WRECKS TEXAS HOTEL; 4 HURT

MERCEDES, Tex., April 6.—(UP)—An explosion of natural gas demolished the Barbee hotel here today, injuring four persons, one critically.

Claud Reynolds of Santa Maria, Tex., in whose room the gas had accumulated, was near death from burns. Three others whose names were not learned escaped with minor injuries.

The blast, much in the manner of the New London school disaster March 18, blew the roof from the building and caved in the walls of the one-story structure. All persons within the building were believed accounted for.

Officers investigating the explosion theorized that an open gas jet under Reynolds' bed was responsible for the gas accumulation. The gas ignited when he struck a match, Reynolds said.

OIL STOVE EXPLOSION WRECKS LOGAN TAVERN

LOGAN, April 6.—(UP)—An oil stove explosion was blamed today for a fire which almost destroyed Grandview tavern, night club on route 31 near here. It formerly was known as Castle Farm. The place was built more than 100 years ago by Robert Wright, grandfather of Charles Wright, present owner.

NATIONAL GUARD TO HELP NEEDY UNDER NEW PLAN

Joint Conference Called by Sen. Lawrence as Governor Acts

MOVE PROVES SURPRISE

Many Cities to be in Need as Funds Run Out

COLUMBUS, April 6—(UP)—National guard and relief officials today rushed plans to move troops into the state's principal relief areas and set up "field kitchens" by April 15 to feed the needy in compliance with an executive order issued by Gov. Martin L. Davey.

Adjutant General Emil F. Marx was to confer with members of the state relief commission today to determine where the kitchens will first be established and what funds are available to carry out the plan.

The emergency order, issued by the governor at his mansion last night on his return from his home in Kent following a week's illness, came as a distinct shock to administration leaders in both houses and brought a barrage of criticism from Davey foes who termed the move "a grandstand play."

Conference Called
Sen. Keith Lawrence, Cuyahoga, majority floor leader, immediately announced he would call a joint conference of senate Democrats and Republicans to determine the sentiment of the upper house on the relief question. House leaders said they would canvass members today on the same proposal.

The governor told reporters at the mansion press conference that some cities would be "in deep distress" April 15, when the present relief law expires and funds are exhausted, and that he was "forced to resort to this extraordinary measure" because of the legislature's failure to enact permanent relief legislation.

"There is only one purpose in this move—to feed the hungry," the governor said. "I'm going to find out where the areas of greatest stress are and will ask the adjutant general to provide army kitchens for these places."

The governor said he believed the state relief commission would have enough money left over at the expiration of the present stop-gap law "to get things started." He said he would ask the adjutant general to buy additional kitchens if enough were not available.

Field Kitchens Available
National guard officers later pointed out, however, that the guard only had field ranges for outdoor use which could not be used in cities except in vacant lots. They said armories in the smaller cities were equipped with suitable kitchens, however.

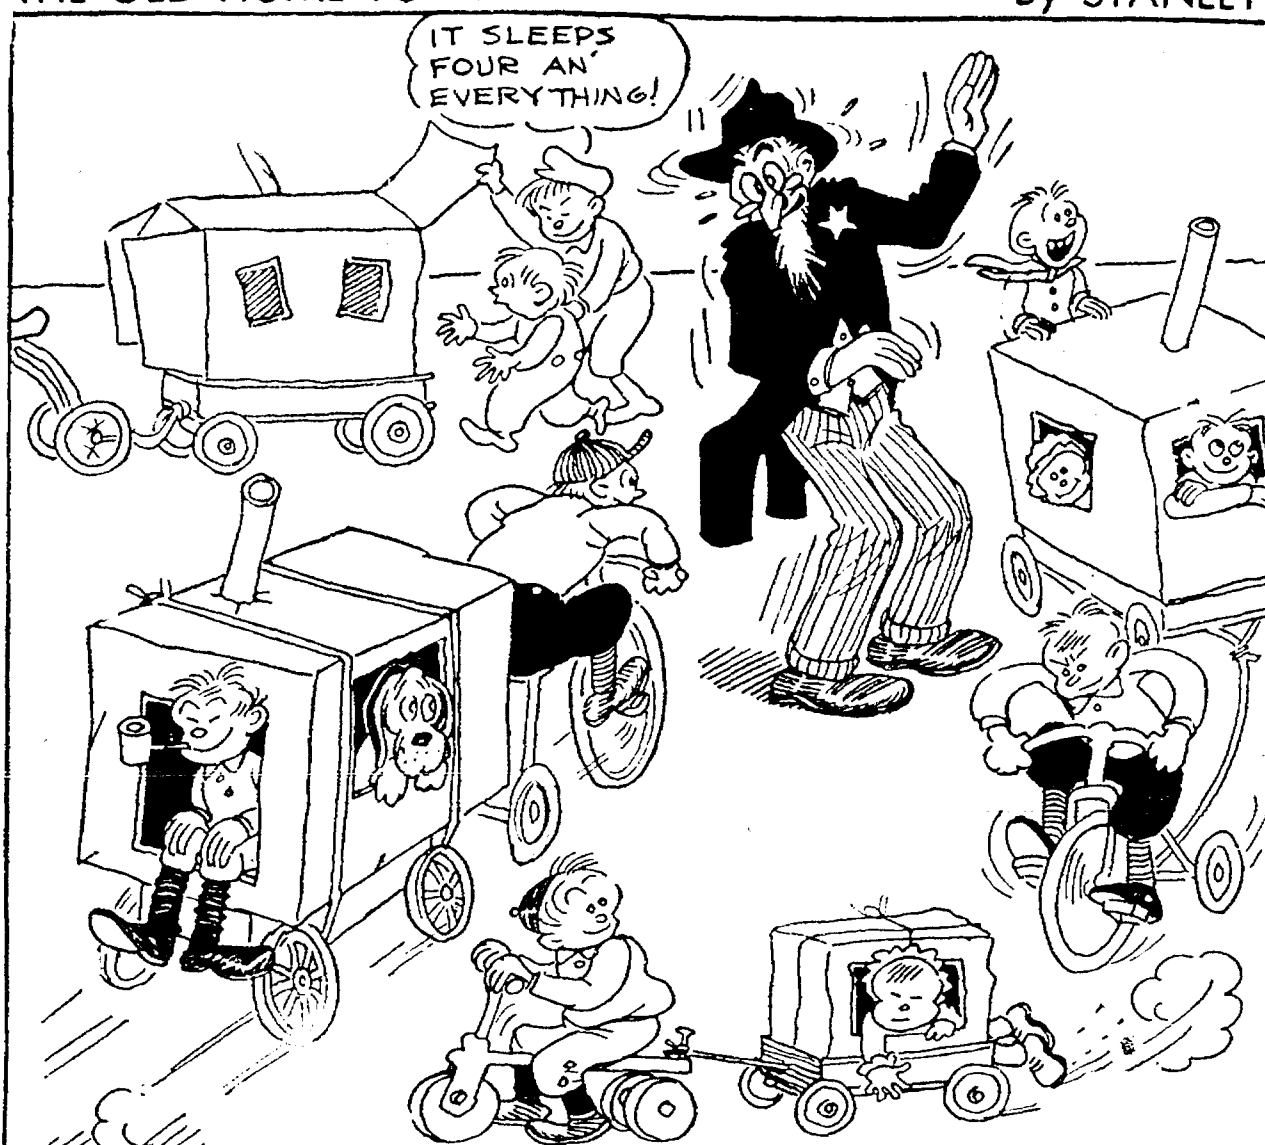

The governor said he did not contemplate asking the legislature for additional funds immediately in the belief the relief commission had about $200,000 which could be turned over to the adjutant general.

Gov. Davey called in Gen. Marx and some of his aides, including Major Si Dunkle and Col. John A. Blount, assistant quartermaster general, Relief Commission Chairman Roy L. Wildermuth, Carlton S. Dargusch, former tax commission vice-chairman; Mrs. Myrna Smith, secretary to the governor and John M. Caren, executive secretary.

Neither Marx nor Wildermuth would comment following the meeting other than to announce plans for the conference today. Wildermuth said he "had an idea" where the kitchens would be first established, but would not comment further.

Reaction Immediate
Reaction to the governor's proposal in the legislature was instantaneous and varied. Some administration allied expressed the belief the move would result in an immediate purge of the relief roles of "chislers." Others said they did not believe the governor was "serious," few, apparently, resentful the plan had not been revealed to them beforehand, reserved comment.

Sen. Lawrence said, however, he believed the move would focus attention on the legislature and emphasize the seriousness of the situation.

"The move probably will force some solution before the crisis arrives," he said. He pointed out the senate majority and minority reports on permanent relief legislation which will be brought up Wednesday would result in a test of senate sentiment. The minority report recommends enabling legislation to permit sub-divisions to enact excise taxes.

Republicans to a man, backed by a group of anti-administration Democrats, bitterly assailed the governor's plan.

"Back of this procedure is further proof the Democratic administration and Democratic legislature has miserably failed the needy people of Ohio," Rep. William M. McCulloch, Miami, minority floor leader, said.

Knew of Deficit
"In September, 1936, when the governor proposed to repeal the sales tax on food he knew the state would be faced with a deficit between $12,000,000 and $20,000,000," he said.

J. Harry McGregor, Coshocton, minority whip, said the governor "has no one to blame but himself."

"He knew of this crisis 30 days ago," McGregor said.

While some legislators believed the governor's relief plan would throw the spotlight on the legislature and force speedy enactment of the administration's dollar-for-dollar match proposals, others pointed out it might act as a boomerang by lending impetus to the movement, already seriously advocated in the senate, to subtract relief costs from the $89,000,000 appropriations bill, scheduled for consideration in the house today.

It was authoritatively learned such a proposal will be introduced in the house today. In addition, Rep. Michael V. Di Salle, D., Lucas, announced he would offer a resolution to defer action on the appropriations bill until it could be determined what funds, if any, could be raised by new or additional taxes.

Pity poor Johnny Downs for the part he had to play in "Clarence," the Booth Tarkington comedy of family life which opens Wednesday at the Cliftona Theatre!

As the slightly daft son of the madcap household, Downs has several scenes in which he has to fight, scold, nag and generally annoy his pretty sister.

It would have been perfectly fine if the sister had been anybody other than Eleanor Whitney. But she is Miss Whitney—and Johnny and Eleanor are such dear friends, what with being seen together almost constantly in Hollywood and everything!

The cast of "Clarence" is headed by Roscoe Karns and includes Charlotte Wynters, Spring Byington, Inez Courtney, and Richard Powell, and there's plenty of scrap- ping among them all.

AT THE GRAND

To Jane Withers now goes the prize for the most novel dressing room in Hollywood.

Scorning the conventional portable outfit used by most actresses, the ingenious young Twentieth Century-Fox star of "Can This Be Dixie?" now playing at the Grand Theatre, located a decompression chamber where she now makes her quick changes.

The chamber was previously used for deep-sea diving scenes in an underwater film, and Jane found it in a corner of the stage where she was working on her present picture. She appropriated it at once.

200 START SIEGE OF MINNESOTA'S SENATE CHAMBER

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 6 — (UP) — Two hundred members of the people's lobby for progressive legislation held the state senate chamber today in a sit-down siege to force passage of administration bills. They demanded passage of the administration's bills on taxation, agriculture, labor, veterans, unemployment, social insurance, power, and youth and adult education. "The auto strikers in Detroit remained on their sit-down strike more than a month," Harry Mayville, Minneapolis, said in a "pep talk" from the senate chair. "We'll stay here three months if necessary." They started their siege last night, a few minutes after marching on the capital and demanding audience with Gov. Elmer A. Benson. The governor obliged with a speech denouncing the "reactionary senate."

TINIEST BABY, NOW WEEK OLD, GAINS STRENGTH

ALBIA, Ia., April 6 — (UP) — Charles Peter Johnston, born so small that doctors said he couldn't live, was one week old today. He observed the event with a new diet — a mixture of condensed milk and water. The mixture replaced mother's milk, but corn syrup and the hourly drop of whiskey were retained. The "atom baby" — he weighed little more than 10 ounces when born in the two-room home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnston — scaled well over a pound today. Doctors said every day he survived added to his chances of growing into a normal child. Seven inches long at birth, he is well past the one-foot mark now.

DEMOCRATS ON TOP IN EARLY MICHIGAN VOTE

DETROIT, April 6 — (UP) — Returns from more than two-thirds of Michigan's 3,480 voting precincts indicated today that the Democratic party might duplicate its victorious sweep in the November elections.

Democratic candidates for nine state offices — only one an incumbent seeking re-election — were leading Republican opponents on the basis of incomplete returns. Normally Democratic Wayne county (Detroit) appeared to again be offsetting the heavy Republican vote upstate for two justices of the Michigan supreme court, two regents for the University of Michigan, the post of state highway commissioner, two members of the state board of agriculture, a superintendent of public instruction and a member of the state board of education.

Leading his party's ticket with a comfortable 76,000 vote margin on the basis of returns from 2,953 precincts, was Murray D. Van Wagener, incumbent highway commissioner. In Democratic state circles Van Wagener was second in importance only to Gov. Frank Murphy whose labor policies in present sit-down strikes were considered an issue in yesterday's election.

Watkins Fly Spray has been recognized for a long time as one of the best on the market. Now it's better than ever before. You get more for your money, because it gives a faster knock-down, a greater kill and will repel flies for a longer time. Test after test has shown it to be much superior to anything I have sold here. It is clean and odorless, will not gum up the hair or out tainting the milk. It is so clean that it can be used in the house, without staining or discoloring curtains, rugs or draperies. It's economical, too, because many dairy men report that they have to buy only half as many gallons of Watkins Fly Spray to get the same results. It's cheaper because it goes further.

FALSE PROSPERITY

IN Germany there is no one free to warn
the people of the economic dangers inherent in a governmental policy that calls for the setting aside of seventy-five percent of the national budget for military purposes. The people of Russia and Italy
also are kept in the dark concerning the inevitable chaos destined to follow a false prosperity based upon the production of instruments of destruction. England is more fortunate, if not in policy at least in the freedom with which an essentially evil
policy may be discussed.

England is now enjoying at least the prospect of a boom. During the next five years the Government will advance a tremendous armament program involving an expenditure of $7,500,000,000. While the politicians anticipate the benefits with intense satisfaction, the Manchester Guardian
discusses the issue realistically.

"But it is foolish all the same to pretend that the general effect is good; that we shall not suffer from diverting our capital
and labor into these unproductive uses and that we are not creating for ourselves a perilous economic future," the Guardian
says. "We cannot escape a heavy expenditure on rearmament; the best we can do is to admit its dangers and to try to counter
them from the beginning."

Speaking at Buenos Aires last December, President Roosevelt said work thus provided should be called "false employment," for "it builds no permanent structures and creates no consumers' goods for the maintenance of lasting prosperity." He might even have added with every degree
of truth that it leads to economic ruin and possibly to war.

NATURE'S HIGH PRIEST

THE celebration of John Burroughs' 100th anniversary will reawaken in the minds of thoughtful people a sense of the value of simplicity in living, a lesson already learned by many veterans of economic adversity.

To many, simplicity means starkness and
a lack of common comforts, but the nature-wise John Burroughs found it not so. In the soothing rhythm of Nature's slow processes he read messages of eternal meaning, and by his disregard of gross materialism proved truly that --

"Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."

In a feverish world, John Burroughs'
name stands for the ultimate in calm, indestructible life-philosophy, as evidenced by his inimitable works. The return to Nature is the best back-log, after all, for citywarped folk suffering from the nerve-strain of metropolitan madness.

The Maine legislature has voted down
a plan to establish a state lottery—there
we go and use the word again, despite warnings from Washington.

MAC ARTHUR, McNUTT MAY CLASH

WASHINGTON — You can write it down
in the book as certain that when Field Marshal Douglas Mac Arthur and High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt both get back to Manila, sparks will fly over the Philippines.

Both men have very similar qualities.
Mac Arthur is tall, handsome, dynamic,
able, extremely ambitious; as Chief of Staff was the key man in the Army for more than five years; is at his best in the center of the limelight.

Governor McNutt also is tall, handsome,
dynamic, able, extremely ambitious and loves the limelight. Both also are enthusiastic militarists. Where Mac Arthur was a regular army man, McNutt started with the reserve field artillery, worked up to the rank of colonel during the World War,
was National Commander of the American Legion. McNutt has garnered a breastful of decorations; Mac Arthur has garnered slightly more.

As Field Marshal of the Philippine Army, Mac Arthur has been second in standing only to President Quezon. Playing a clever behind-the-scenes role, MacArthur
is the real power behind Quezon. The Philippine President almost invariably follows
his advice.

During most of this period, Commissioner Frank Murphy now Governor of Michigan, was in the United States, did not crowd Mac Arthur for the limelight.

But now Murphy is being replaced by a man who got in so many people's hair as Governor of Indiana that he was a questionable asset to Roosevelt last November.
As High Commissioner to the Philippines,
he will not be content to twiddle his thumbs. McNutt is a glory-seeker. And if he and Mac Arthur do not tangle, then human nature is no longer human nature.

PRESS-WISE

In his conferences with the press and War Department officials during his recent visit to Washington, Governor McNutt knew all the answers. Nothing about the Philippines was new to him.

Army officers got bored with this, could do nothing about it. But newspapermen were in a different category. Finally one of them engaged McNutt in a conversation
about rubber in the Philippines.

"I suppose you know," the correspondent said, "about the efforts to develop the southern island of Mindanao, as a rubber colony?"

"Oh yes, I know all about that," replied
McNutt.

"The Firestone company has been down
there making quite an extensive survey,"
continued the correspondent.

"Yes, I know, I know," replied McNutt.

"They are planning to start a rubber plantation of about 30,000 acres."

"Yes, yes, I know all about it," repeated
McNutt.

"Well, it isn't true," concluded the reporter, turning on his heel. "The Firestone Company gave up that idea years ago."

Europe is falling back on the ancient fallacy that the bigger the army the less likelihood of a war.

Bread's Value Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I HAVE JUST found out where Sylvester Graham borrowed his ideas. Sylvester was not a particularly admirable character, but one would suppose that, at least his ideas about bread
were his own, even if just because they are hoarse. Reprehensible as it is to steal somebody else's ideas, it is a real turpitude to steal ideas that are wrong.

Dr. Clending

I am informed that in 1821 a little book entitled, "A Treatise on the Art of Making Good and Wholesome Bread of Wheat, Oats, Rye, Barley and Other Farinaceous Grain,"
was published in London, the author being Frederick Accum.
Accum was a shrewd chemist, and
much that is in his book is fundamental for modern bread making.

He traces the history of bread-
making back into prehistoric times,
until its actual origin is lost in the Greek myth that it was a gift from the great god Pan.

Goes "Off Base"

"We know that the Jews practiced the art in the time of Moses," Accum says, "because of the passage in the Book of Exodus which prohibits the use of leavened, that is, fermented, bread, during the celebration of the Passover. But it does not appear that loaf-bread
was known to Abraham, for his history we read frequently of cakes, but not of fermented bread.
It is therefore very probable that the art of making fermented bread
took its rise in the East, and that the Jews learned it from the Egyptians. . . . The Roman bakers, according to Pliny, came from Greece
with the Macedonian army. Before this period, the Romans were often distinguished by the appellation of
'eaters of papp'."

When it comes to the question of refined or processed flour, however,
the author goes a little off base.

"Had it not been for the custom of eating whiter bread than the whole of the flour can make, the miller
and baker would not have employed their art to render the bread
as white as possible, and to make the consumer pay for the artificial whiteness. . . . Our forefathers never refined so much; they never preyed so much on each other; nor,
I presume, made so many laws necessary for their restraint, as we do.
. . . The inference which I mean to draw from what is premised, is to remind my fellow citizens of the unfortunate delusion of thinking
that the whole flour of the wheat
is not good enough for them; that part of it must be taken away, and
given to birds or beasts."

The author thinks that the debasement of refined flour is due to the fact that city dwellers have acquired a taste for highly refined products. He calls attention to the fact that the common people of Scotland have always preferred
oatmeal bread, the hardness of the race being ascribed to that fact.
The people of Westphalia live on a coarse brown rye bread and they are unusually robust, because the bread is very nutritive and strengthening. He thinks the French and Germans are far superior to the English in gastro-nomic health because they convert
the farinaceous flour of vegetables
into a variety of excellent articles
of food and do not use them, as the English do, as a mere accompaniment to pair off with so many mouthfuls of meat.

These ideas aroused quite a storm of controversy and are, I believe, the first expression in modern literature of the tendency to praise whole wheat bread. Of course, whole wheat bread is no
more healthy than white bread and,
incidentally, no more unhealthy.
Some people are not able to stand
so much roughage but, in general,
it is just as healthy as any other kind of bread. The only reason it is not more widely used is that it is not as pleasant to the average person as our highly refined white bread.

Accum's warning evidently did not take very deep root, because our city dwellers demand even more refined food than he furnished.

The MOUTHPIECE

COPYRIGHT—RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:
Charles Stuckey, of a London law
firm, reluctantly agreed to a scheme
to defraud the daughter of one of his most respected clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000
from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Colonel Alex Lutman,
who has a hold over Stuckey, and Jim Accum, an ex-convict, are stopping at the same hotel in Coblenz with Mrs.
Smith and her daughter. Jim hopes to marry the girl, having her assign her property to him, before Stuckey informs her of her inheritance. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith already is impressed with Jim, going as a wealthy Englishman, as an admirable
"catch" for her daughter. Lutman is the role of Jim's trustee, subtly threatens Jacqueline with a check he has cashed for her mother, returned marked "insufficient funds." Finding her mother distraught over their financial plight, and Lutman's implied threat
over the check, Jacqueline tells her the will marry Jim. Stuckey arrives at the hotel and Jacqueline meets him accidentally. Charles shows Jacqueline a rough draft of the marriage settlement he says her mother asked him to draw up. Stalling for time, Charles tells her that the deed must be signed in London.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:
CHAPTER 17
COLONEL LUTMAN screwed
his eyeglass in a little more firmly and glared at Charles with his other eye with the realization of the delay in the wedding caused by Charles' insistence that the deed be
signed in London.

"If it's the law, it's the law," he said, "but I think, Mr. Stuckey, that a solicitor who really had his clients' interests at heart might have found some less dilatory
method."

"And surely," said Mrs. Smith,
with a touch of asperity, "if you've
only brought the draft agreement
there was no need for you to have come at all. All that expense,
when the mail could have done it
just as well. Besides, you could have wired Registration, or whatever it is, not legal unless so-and-
so, and we'd have understood and made arrangements accordingly."

Colonel Lutman smiled.
"I fancy Mr. Stuckey must be fond of travel, Mrs. Smith. Perhaps you've never seen the Danube
before, Mr. Stuckey?"

"As a matter of fact, I haven't,"
said Charles with a hint of smile.
"Quite amazing, isn't it? I had always understood it was blue."

"But don't worry, Mrs. Smith," said Colonel Lutman. "We'll all travel together to London. I am leaving in any case." He glanced at Jim. "I have wasted too much time over this young man's love affairs already. I will get reservations on the Oriental and we can leave tomorrow. Five sleepers cabin on the boat, and Pullmans
from Dover."

Mrs. Smith smiled at him.
"That is awfully kind of you,
Colonel Lutman. I always make such a muddle when I buy tickets,
and I am always rather surprised
when I really arrive at the place I want to go to. I will leave everything to you and we can settle up later, can't we?" She got up from her chair. "Come along, Jacqueline," she said; "we must go and pack."

Jacqueline turned, bestowed a smile on Charles, and followed her mother across the terrace.

The three men watched them until they disappeared into the hotel,
and then Jim suddenly swung round in his chair and banged his fist on the table.

"What the devil do you think you're doing, Stuckey?" he demanded. "You dirty, double-crossing . . ."

"Shut up, Jim," interrupted Lut-
man, and turned to Charles. "What,
exactly, is the idea, Charles?"
Jim got to his feet.

"If you're trying to twist me,
Charles, but it can't be done. It's a hard world for sentimental people like you and me, but we must steel our hearts, Charles, and do our duty. Look at this." He took a newspaper clipping from his pocket and read: "Chicago Press,
Paris edition. 'Alan Redfern dead.
Oil millionaire leaves $1,500,000 to English niece.' Suppose Mrs.
Smith or Jacqueline had seen that,
eh? Suppose they do see it tomorrow? How much do you think there'd be for us three to cut up?
And try to remember, Charles, that if anything unfortunate like that were to happen I should be the loser, not you." Jim. "I have already spent a lot of money on this little scheme and I don't intend to lose it."

"I wish to heaven I had never told you she'd been left the money," exclaimed Charles.
"If I remember rightly, Charles,"
said Lutman, "you didn't tell me.
I read the cable on your desk in the office."

"Yes, and I wish you'd never set foot in my office."
"Of all the rotten little skunks!"
said Jim. "If Lutman hadn't backed you, you wouldn't have an office. Lutman has been mighty good to you, Stuckey. . . ."

Lutman cut him short.
"My dear James, in a moment I shall bluish. And now listen.
Charles, you've got to be a good boy and do as we arranged and forget all about the soft look in Miss Jacqueline's eyes and the
glint of the sunlight in her hair."
He dropped his eyeglasses and his mouth was suddenly grim. "This thing's going through. Get that into your head. There's nothing illegal in it. Jim marries the girl;
we cut it five ways and I take three."

Charles' fingers were drumming
the top of the table.
"It's robbery. I can't let the girl
be robbed."
"Who's robbing her?" demanded
the Colonel. "You take $300,000
and make a trust for the mother
and daughter—we can't touch that.
The girl will be better off than
she's ever been in her life."
Charles jerked a thumb toward Jim Asson.

"She'll have him, though,"
said Jim. "Well, I got her, didn't I?"
said Lutman.
"Oh, yes, you got her," said Lutman sneeringly. "Let's get this straight before we go any farther, James. You got her on my money,
and you got her on my money, and don't you forget it. Charles and I are under no sort of obligation to you. If I hadn't bought you your pretty clothes and sent you
out here looking as nearly a gentleman as we could manage to make you, you wouldn't have been
in on this scheme at all."

"Oh, all right, all right," said Jim soothingly. "But I don't want any more of that 'she'll have him'
stuff, will you? She won't have you, anyway." He turned abruptly and strode away.

"Once and for all, Charles," said Lutman, "there is to be no backing out now. We leave for London tonight and arrive tomorrow, and two days later those two will be married. The deed is to be ready for signature in 48 hours from now,
and if it isn't . . ." He paused and gave a shrug. "In this beautiful scenery, Charles," he said, "don't let us even talk of anything unpleasant."

For a long time after Lutman
had left him Charles remained seated on the terrace, gazing out across the river. The expression on his face did not indicate that he saw anything beautiful in the view at all.

FALSE PROSPERITY

IN Germany there is no one free to warn the people of the economic dangers inherent in a governmental policy that calls for the setting aside of seventy-five percent of the national budget for military purposes. The people of Russia and Italy also are kept in the dark concerning the inevitable chaos destined to follow a false prosperity based upon the production of instruments of destruction. England is more fortunate, if not in policy at least in the freedom with which an essentially evil policy may be discussed.

England is now enjoying at least the prospect of a boom. During the next five years the Government will advance a tremendous armament program involving an expenditure of $7,500,000,000. While the politicians anticipate the benefits with intense satisfaction, the Manchester Guardian discusses the issue realistically.

"But it is foolish all the same to pretend that the general effect is good; that we shall not suffer from diverting our capital and labor into these unproductive uses and that we are not creating for ourselves a perilous economic future," the Guardian says. "We cannot escape a heavy expenditure on rearmament; the best we can do is to admit its dangers and to try to counter them from the beginning."

Speaking at Buenos Aires last December, President Roosevelt said work thus provided should be called "false employment," for "it builds no permanent structures and creates no consumers' goods for the maintenance of lasting prosperity." He might even have added with every degree of truth that it leads to economic ruin and possibly to war.

NATURE'S HIGH PRIEST

THE celebration of John Burroughs' 100th anniversary will reawaken in the minds of thoughtful people a sense of the value of simplicity in living, a lesson already learned by many veterans of economic adversity.

To many, simplicity means starkness and a lack of common comforts, but the nature-wise John Burroughs found it not so. In the soothing rhythm of Nature's slow processes he read messages of eternal meaning, and by his disregard of gross materialism proved truly that --

"Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."

In a feverish world, John Burroughs' name stands for the ultimate in calm, indestructible life-philosophy, as evidenced by his inimitable works. The return to Nature is the best back-log, after all, for city-warped folk suffering from the nerve-strain of metropolitan madness.

The Maine legislature has voted down a plan to establish a state lottery--there we go and use the word again, despite warnings from Washington.

MAC ARTHUR, McNUTT MAY CLASH

WASHINGTON — You can write it down in the book as certain that when Field Marshal Douglas Mac Arthur and High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt both get back to Manila, sparks will fly over the Philippines.

Both men have very similar qualities. Mac Arthur is tall, handsome, dynamic, able, extremely ambitious; as Chief of Staff was the key man in the Army for more than five years; is at his best in the center of the limelight.

Governor McNutt also is tall, handsome, dynamic, able, extremely ambitious and loves the limelight. Both also are enthusiastic militarists. Where Mac Arthur was a regular army man, McNutt started with the reserve field artillery, worked up to the rank of colonel during the World War, was National Commander of the American Legion. McNutt has garnered a breastful of decorations; Mac Arthur has garnered slightly more.

As Field Marshal of the Philippine Army, Mac Arthur has been second in standing only to President Quezon. Playing a clever behind-the-scenes role, MacArthur is the real power behind Quezon. The Philippine President almost invariably follows his advice.

During most of this period, Commissioner Frank Murphy now Governor of Michigan, was in the United States, did not crowd Mac Arthur for the limelight.

But now Murphy is being replaced by a man who got in so many people's hair as Governor of Indiana that he was a questionable asset to Roosevelt last November. As High Commissioner to the Philippines, he will not be content to twiddle his thumbs. McNutt is a glory-seeker. And if he and Mac Arthur do not tangle, then human nature is no longer human nature.

PRESS-WISE

In his conferences with the press and War Department officials during his recent visit to Washington, Governor McNutt knew all the answers. Nothing about the Philippines was new to him.

Army officers got bored with this, could do nothing about it. But newspapermen were in a different category. Finally one of them engaged McNutt in a conversation about rubber in the Philippines.

"I suppose you know," the correspondent said, "about the efforts to develop the southern island of Mindanao, as a rubber colony?"

"Oh yes, I know all about that," replied McNutt.

"The Firestone company has been down there making quite an extensive survey," continued the correspondent.

"Yes, I know, I know," replied McNutt.

"They are planning to start a rubber plantation of about 30,000 acres."

"Yes, yes, I know all about it," repeated McNutt.

"Well, it isn't true," concluded the reporter, turning on his heel. "The Firestone Company gave up that idea years ago."

Bread's Value Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I HAVE JUST found out where Sylvester Graham borrowed his ideas. Sylvester was not a particularly admirable character, but one would suppose that at least his ideas about bread were his own, even if just because they are hokey. Reprehensible as it is to steal somebody else's ideas, it involves real turpitude to steal ideas that are wrong.

Dr. Clendingning

I am informed that in 1821 a little book entitled, "A Treatise on the Art of Making Good and Wholesome Bread of Wheat, Oats, Rye, Barley and Other Farinaceous Grain," was published in London, the author being Frederick Accum. Accum was a shrewd chemist, and much that is in his book is fundamental for modern bread making.

He traces the history of bread-making back into prehistoric times, until its actual origin is lost in the Greek myth that it was a gift from the great god Pan.

Goes "Off Base"

"We know that the Jews practiced the art in the time of Moses," Accum says, "because of the passage in the Book of Exodus which prohibits the use of leavened, that is, fermented, bread, during the celebration of the Passover. But it does not appear that loaf-bread was known to Abraham, for his history we read frequently of cakes, but not of fermented bread. It is therefore very probable that the art of making fermented bread took its rise in the East, and that the Jews learned it from the Egyptians. . . . The Roman bakers, according to Pliny, came from Greece with the Macedonian army. Before this period, the Romans were often distinguished by the appellation of 'eaters of papp'."

When it comes to the question of refined or processed flour, however, the author goes a little off base.

"Had it not been for the custom of eating whiter bread than the whole of the flour can make, the miller and baker would not have employed their art to render the bread as white as possible, and to make the consumer pay for the artificial whiteness. . . . Our forefathers never refined so much; they never preyed so much on each other; nor, I presume, made so many laws necessary for their restraint, as we do. . . . The inference which I mean to draw from what is premised, is to remind my fellow citizens of the unfortunate delusion of thinking that the whole flour of the wheat is not good enough for them; that part of it must be taken away, and given to birds or beasts."

The author thinks that the debasing or refining of flour is due to the fact that city dwellers have acquired a taste for highly refined products. He calls attention to the fact that the common people of Scotland have always preferred oatmeal bread, the hardness of the race being ascribed to that fact. The people of Westphalia live on a coarse brown rye bread and they are unusually robust, because the bread is very nutritive and strengthening. He thinks the French and Germans are far superior to the English in gastronomic health because they convert the farinaceous flour of vegetables into a variety of excellent articles of food and do not use them, as the English do, as a mere companion to pair off with so many mouthfuls of meat.

These ideas aroused quite a storm of controversy and are, I believe, the first expression in modern literature of the tendency to praise whole wheat bread. Of course, whole wheat bread is no more healthy than white bread and, incidentally, no more unhealthy. So much people are not able to stand so much roughage but, in general, it is just as healthy as any other kind of bread. The only reason it is not more widely used is that it is not as pleasant to the average person as our highly refined white bread.

Accum's warning evidently did not take very deep root, because our city dwellers demand even more refined food than he furnished.

The MOUTHPIECE

EDGAR WALLACE and ROBERT CURTIS

READ THIS FIRST:

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly has agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Colonel Alex Lutman, who has a hold over Stuckey, and Jim Asson, an ex-convict, are stopping at Smith and her daughter. Jim hopes to marry the girl, having her assign her property to him, before Stuckey is impressed with Jim, posing as a wealthy Englishman, as an admirable "catch" for her daughter. Lutman, in the role of Jim's trustee, subtly threatens Jacqueline with a check he marked "insufficient funds." Finding her mother distraught over their financial plight and Lutman's implied threat over the check, Jacqueline tells a rough draft of the marriage settlement to her mother. Charles Stuckey, who tells Mrs. Smith the deed must be signed in London.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 17
COLONEL LUTMAN screwed his eyeglass in a little more firmly and glared at Charles with his other eye with the realization of the delay in the wedding caused by Charles' insistence that the deed be signed in London.

"If it's the law, it's the law," he said, "but I think, Mr. Stuckey, that a solicitor who really had his clients' interests at heart might have found some less dilatory method."

"And surely," said Mrs. Smith, with a touch of asperity, "if you've only brought the draft agreement there was no need for you to have come at all. All that expense, when the mail could have done it just as well. Besides, you could have wired 'Registration, or whatever it is, not legal unless so-and-so,' and we'd have understood and made arrangements accordingly."

Colonel Lutman smiled. "I fancy Mr. Stuckey must be fond of travel, Mrs. Smith. Perhaps you've never seen the Danube before, Mr. Stuckey?"

"As a matter of fact, I haven't," said Charles with a hint of a smile. "Quite amazing, isn't it? I had always understood it was blue."

"But don't worry, Mrs. Smith," said Colonel Lutman. "We'll all travel together to London. I am leaving in any case." He looked at Jim. "I have wasted too much time over this young man's love affairs already. I will get reservations on the Oriental and we can leave tomorrow. Five sleepers, cabin on the boat, and Pullmans from Dover."

Mrs. Smith smiled at him. "That is awfully kind of you, Colonel Lutman. I always make such a muddle when I buy tickets, and I am always rather surprised when I really arrive at the place I want to go to. I will leave everything to you and we can settle up later, can't we?" She got up from her chair. "Come along, Jacqueline," she said; "we must go and pack."

Jacqueline turned, bestowed a smile on Charles, and followed her mother across the terrace. The three men watched them until they disappeared into the hotel, and then Jim suddenly swung round in his chair and banged his fist on the table.

"What the devil do you think of that, Stuckey?" he demanded. "You dirty, double-crossing . . ."

"Shut up, Jim," interrupted Lutman, and turned to Charles. "What, exactly, is the idea, Charles?"

Jim got to his feet.

"If you're trying to twist me,

Stuckey—all that about registration and signing in London—it's rot, and you know it's rot. There's no earthly reason why the deed should not be signed today and the marriage come off tomorrow, and if you're playing any of your low-down tricks . . ."

Lutman got to his feet and laid a hand on Jim's shoulder.

"All things considered, my dear James," he said, "this is not the time or place to kick up a fuss, and it's certainly not your job to do it. What have you got to beat about? You've had a thousand of my money to spend, haven't you? Behave like a bridegroom and leave it to me."

"But can't you see what it is, Lutman?" exclaimed Jim. "I told you Stuckey was no good, didn't I? I told you what kind of a man he was."

"My dear James," interrupted Lutman, with a significant glance at Charles, "I think friend Stuckey will agree that no one knows better than I do what kind of a man he is."

"He's gone cold on it," said Jim. "I told you he would."

Lutman turned to Charles again. "We don't want to hurry you, Charles," he said, "but we should like to hear as soon as possible just what the great idea is."

Charles shrugged his shoulders. "I don't see what you are making all the fuss about," he said. "What difference can a week make?"

"A day can make a difference," said Jim. "You can't keep this sort of thing dark forever. If Jacqueline or her mother got to hear of the legacy . . ."

"My dear James," interrupted Lutman, "if you will keep talking I shall have to beat your face off. But Jim's right, Charles: a week may make all the difference in the world; a day may make a difference. You were as emphatic about that in London as I was. You can't kid the New York lawyers indefinitely. If you don't produce Jacqueline Smith they'll get busy on their own to find her. Why the sudden change of mind?"

Charles stared at his preposterous pipe and made no reply. "Go on, Stuckey, what is it?"

"It's like this, Lutman," said Charles reluctantly. "Suppose you were a general in charge of troops and you ordered 'em into action and you knew that every man-jack of 'em would be killed--well, that wouldn't be so bad if you were sitting at headquarters well away from it all; but if you went and had a look at them before they went over the top it might make all the difference. It wouldn't be quite so easy to give the word for them to go."

Lutman smiled rather grimly. "Oh, I see. Our dear, sentimental Charles! So you've come out here and seen the girl and been touched by her sweet young innocence, and now you haven't the heart to see the scheme through."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Jim. "You might have guessed it, Lutman. Stuckey's fallen for her. Just the sentimental sort of sloop you'd expect from him. I told you he wasn't to be trusted."

"Fallen for her, has he?" said Lutman. "Well, you really can't blame him, can you, James? And as regards Jacqueline, it's rather difficult, perhaps, to imagine Charles Stuckey, the 'Mouthpiece' of Rotherhithe, arousing her tender emotions, but if she'd fall for a low-down little rat like you, she'd fall for anyone." He turned to Charles. "I'm sorry, my dear Charles, but it can't be done. It's a hard world for sentimental people like you and me, but we must steel our hearts, Charles, and do our duty. Look at this." He took a newspaper clipping from his pocket and read: "Chicago Press, Paris edition. 'Alan Redfern dead. Oil millionaire leaves $1,500,000 to English niece.' Suppose Mrs. Smith or Jacqueline had seen that, eh? Suppose they do see it tomorrow? How much do you think there'd be for us three to cut up? And try to remember, Charles, that if anything unfortunate like that were to happen I should be the loser more than you or Jim. I have already spent a lot of money on this little scheme and I don't intend to lose it."

"I wish to heaven I had never told you she'd been left the money," exclaimed Charles.

"If I remember rightly, Charles," said Lutman, "you didn't tell me. I read the cable on your desk in the office."

"Yes, and I wish you'd never set foot in my office."

"Of all the rotten little skunks!" said Jim. "If Lutman hadn't backed you, you wouldn't have an office. Lutman has been mighty good to you, Stuckey. . . ."

Lutman cut him short. "My dear James, in a moment I shall blush. And now listen. Charles, you've got to be a good boy and do as we arranged and forget all about the soft look in Miss Jacqueline's eyes and the glint of the sunlight in her hair."

He dropped his eyeglasses and his mouth was suddenly grim. "This thing's going through. Get that into your head. There's nothing illegal in it. Jim marries the girl; we cut it five ways and I take three."

Charles' fingers were drumming the top of the table. "It's robbery. I can't let the girl be robbed."

"Who's robbing her?" demanded the Colonel. "You take $300,000 and make a trust for the mother and daughter—we can't touch that. The girl will be better off than she's ever been in her life."

Charles jerked a thumb toward Jim Asson. "She'll have him, though."

"Well, I got her, didn't I?" said Jim.

"Oh, yes, you got her!" said Lutman sneeringly. "Let's get this straight before we go any farther, James. You got her on my money, and I don't want you to forget it. Charles and I are under no sort of obligation to you. If I hadn't bought you your pretty clothes and sent you out here looking as nearly a gentleman as we could manage to make you, you wouldn't have been in on this scheme at all."

"Oh, all right, all right," said Jim soothingly. "But I don't want any more of that 'she'll have him' stuff, Stuckey. She won't have you, anyway." He turned abruptly and strode away.

"Once and for all, Charles," said Lutman, "there is to be no backing out now. We leave for London tonight and arrive tomorrow, and two days later those two will be married. The deed is to be ready for signature in 48 hours from now, and if it isn't . . ."

He paused and gave a shrug. "In this beautiful scenery, Charles," he said, "don't let us even talk of anything unpleasant."

For a long time after Lutman had left him Charles remained seated on the terrace, gazing out across the river. The expression on his face did not indicate that he saw anything beautiful in the view at all.

Stomach Gas So Bad Seems To Hurt Heart

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."

—Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas, pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shank, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli! Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation."

To Hurt Heart

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel fat." —Mrs. Jas. Miller.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas, pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoup, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation.

LESSON TO TEST HOLLINGSWORTH'S ARM IN CONTEST WITH ROCHESTER

LONG HILL AGE MAY HOLD KEY TO RED SUCCESS

Moore and Grissom Fail in Monday's Game With Phillies

WALKS, ERRORS HURT Recent Automobile Crash Impairs Pitcher

LEESBURG, Fla., April 6 — (UP) — Manager Charley Dressen of the Cincinnati Reds was to determine here today whether Al Hollingsworth, youthful right-hander who is counted on to be one of the hurling corps mainstays this season, has recovered from an elbow injury received in an automobile accident two weeks ago.

Hollingsworth was scheduled to share the pitching assignment with the rookie, Dick Barrett, as the Reds faced the Rochester club of the International League.

After receiving good pitching in the majority of its spring games, Cincinnati had two of its best rookie prospects come through with decidedly sour box performances yesterday as the club dropped a 6 to 3 decision to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Two Rookies Fail
Lloyd (Whitey) Moore worked seven innings and Lee Grissom, the burly southpaw, finished the contest.

Moore was nipped for only five hits, but they were well bunched. The Phillies coupled two walks and a pair of outfield flies for a run in the first inning, pushed across two more markers in the third when they bunched four of their hits and secured their final run off Moore in the seventh on a walk, a sacrifice and a single.

The Phils' other two runs came off Grissom in the eighth. They were pushed across as the direct result of three errors.

Cincinnati secured two runs off Claude Passeau in the second inning and was then blanked until the seventh.

PERSPECTIVE TAKES LEAP

HONOLULU (UP)—Perspective increases war casualties, according to John F. G. Stokes of the Hawaiian Historical Society. When King Kamehameha pushed an army over a precipice in 1795 the number of dead mentioned was 300. Now, Stokes declared it is placed at 10,000. He believes that by 1950 the number will be greater than the population of the islands at the moment the battle was fought.

RAW ROCKS

A BRILLIANT first baseman, who has been knocking at the door of major league gates for the last few years, has walked in through the open door of the New York Giants' clubhouse, and appears set to become the Giants' first sacker.

That's by way of introducing Johnny McCarthy, Chicago boy, who joined the Giants at the close of last season.

Jack is a left-hander, over six feet tall, and in the 185-pound class. He came to the Giants from Newark, where he hit only .276 in 151 games, but fielded splendidly.

The tall first baseman had been aiming at a southpaw pitching career in Chicago Brooklyn shortstop noted his fielding. Jack was invited to try out with the Brooklyn, which he did in 1934. Since then he has been with Dayton, Sacramento, Alhambra and finally Newark.

CANZONERI HITS LEVY TOO HARD IN NEWARK BOUT

NEWARK, N. J., April 6.—(UP)—Former Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri in his first tune-up match for a title bout with Lou Ambers on May 7, scored an impressive victory over George Levy, Trenton, N. J., Italian, last night.

Canzoneri, who deserted his role as "gentleman farmer" on his Marlborough, N. Y., estate for another crack at the title he lost to Ambers last September, was awarded a technical knockout over Levy in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

Tough Tony floored Levy seven times before Referee Whiteley Haley stopped the bout.

Canzoneri weighed 138; Levy, 136½.

JIMMY WILSON'S CREW IS READY FOR RETURN HOP

WINTERHAVEN, Fla., April 6.—(UP)—Jimmy Wilson's rejuvenated Phillies break training camp tomorrow after their came with the Rochester Red Wings of the International League.

The Philadelphia Nationals scored their third straight victory yesterday, 6 to 3, over the Cincinnati Reds. Fred Taub, who has reached first base 14 out of the last 19 times at bat, hit two singles and looks like the starting 1937 Philly center fielder.

A magazine writer commenting on the increase in the organization of Fascist groups in various European countries wonders when this will end. That's easy—when they run out of new colors for shirts.

Kaseys Hopeful With Veteran Nine Lined Up

McALLEN, Tex., April 6.—(UP)—Kansas City hasn't won an American Association pennant since 1929, but the club is conceded an excellent chance for the flag this year.

Harrison (Dutch) Zwilling, veteran pilot, is starting his 11th season at the helm of the Blues, and when he gathered his 28 players here for the training drills 15 on the roster were holdovers and 13 newcomers.

Zwilling places his chief hope for a pennant in the ability of the "Big Four" of his 1936 staff—Wiley Moore, Phil Page, Joe Vance and John Niggeling—to repeat or better last year's performances. This quartet won 57 games for third place a year ago.

If all could duplicate, Zwilling believes the additional mound strength he brought in will carry the club to the flag.

Topping the new hurlers are Ted Kleinham from the New York Yankees via Newark; Lee Stein from the Cincinnati Reds; Joe Gigg and Beryl Richmond, who gained 26 victories between them for Galveston in the Texas league.

Oglesby Comes Back
Jim Oglesby, whose work in 1935 at Los Angeles merited him an advancement to the Philadelphia Athletics, has shown flashes of his old form in camp here and is counted upon for the first base assignment. Oglesby was on the voluntarily retired list last season.

Herman Schulte, a professional star since the day he stepped off the University of Iowa campus in 1934 will be at second base again. Eddie Marshall or Ray French, both holdovers, will get the call at shortstop, with either Marty Hopkins or a newcomer, Charley English, at third. English hit .302 for Fort Worth a year ago, and has been impressive during the training drills.

Veterans in Outfield
For the outfield, Zwilling has available three of last season's gardeners in George Stumpf, Al Marchand and Milt Bocek.

Chris Hartje, a .314 batsman from Oakland of the Pacific Coast league, virtually has clinched the first-string catcher's job, with Eldon Breese, a holdover, as second choice.

If Kansas City gets the high type of pitching the records indicate it will, the Blues figure to be in the thick of the race.

The club opens at home against Minneapolis.

AMBERS BEATEN IN FIGHT TILT WITH MONTANEZ

NEW YORK, April 6.—(UP)—It was a close fight and the galleries thought Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers had won, but referee and judges unanimously agreed that Pedro Montanez, Puerto Rican, had earned the 10-round decision.

The Herkimer hurricane's title was not on the line because both fighters were over the 135-pound limit last night, but there was little doubt that Lou would still be wearing the crown had the battle gone the 15-round championship distance. Montanez weighed 138½; Ambers 137.

Montanez's powerful body attack piled him up a huge margin in the first half of the fight, but Ambers' strong finish had the Puerto Rican groggy at the final bell. He won the sixth, seventh, eighth and tenth rounds easily and appeared as fresh as the start, while Montanez was both leg and arm weary.

Victory for Pedro was supposed to mean a title bout this summer, but Madison Square Garden Promoter Jimmy Johnston indicated that the flashy islander would have to meet the winner of the May 7 Ambers-Tony Canzoneri championship match in another "over-the-weight" 12-round battle before he would get a title shot.

JOHNSTOWN OPENS PURSE
JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (UP)—This city, which has been the scene of two great flood disasters and knows what flood suffering means, was assigned a flood relief quota of $18,000. ## BAD NEWS HALE CLOUTS TRIPLE TO EDGE GIANTS

TYLER, Tex., April 6 — (UP) — The Cleveland Indians led the New York Giants 4-3 as they met here today for the eighth of their 18 spring exhibition games.

The score was tied 3-3 in the eighth yesterday when "Bad News" Hale came to bat with the bases loaded. He smacked a triple. Julius Solters led the Indians' attack with a home run and two singles in three times at bat. George Davis set the Giants' pace with a homer and three one-baggers.

YANKEES SLUGGING

DALLAS, Tex., April 6 — (UP) — The New York Yankees were out for their fifth straight victory since breaking training camp as they clashed with the Dallas steers of the Texas league today. The Yanks submerged the Galveston Bucs, 13-2, yesterday under a 17-hit attack which brought their two-day total of basehits to 35 and runs to 27. Five home runs were added to the Yanks' total yesterday.

GRIMES GIVES UP

SARASOTA, Fla., April 6 — (UP) — Manager Burleigh Grimes of the Brooklyn Dodgers after a long conference with Joe Cronin announced today that he had given up hope of obtaining Moe Berg from the Red Sox. He had planned to use Berg as second catcher and coach. The Dodgers and Sox play their last exhibition of the year here today.

PIRATES BARNSTORM

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., April 6.—(UP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates today headed south on a barnstorming tour preceding the opening of the National league season in Chicago. The Pirates ended a month's training in southern California yesterday by defeating a San Bernardino semi-pro team 7-3.

How About Ball Loop?

Softball's in the air with a meeting to be held Friday evening to discuss plans for activity during the summer — An independent league, of course, will be the object of interested persons—Why couldn't Circleville have a pretty good industrial league with the factories and other businesses putting outfits on the field?—The Container Corporation, Eshelman and Ralston-Purina mills, the Crites interests, The Daily Herald office, Circleville Oil Co., all have enough employees to form teams —Then to round out the loop the loop the Eagles and Elks could put teams of their members in the loop—There is no law against operating a couple of leagues in Circleville—There are available places to play, and interest could be maintained—If an independent league could be formed, it would be just that much better, because recreation could be provided nearly every evening then—An all-star team, picked from the various clubs, could be formed to play Sunday ball—So, there you are, all that is necessary is to obtain the approval of the needed backers, arrange finances, prepare fields for play, draw up rules and regulations, choose umpires, obtain athletes, and get started . . .

Rumors of Trade

There are rumors going round that a big deal is about to be completed between the Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals—Just who is involved, no one is saying as yet . . .

RAW ROOKS

BRILLIANT first baseman, who has been knocking at the door of major league gates for the last few years, has walked in through the open door of the New York Giants' clubhouse, and appears set to become the Giants' first sacker.

That's by way of introducing Johnny McCarthy, Chicago boy, who joined the Giants at the close of last season.

Jack is a left-hander, over six feet tall, and in the 185-pound class. He came to the Giants from Newark, where he hit only .276 in 131 games, but fielded splendidly.

The tall first baseman had been aiming at a southpaw pitching career in Chicago semi-pro circles until a former Brooklyn shortstop noted his fielding. Jack was invited to try out with the Brooklyn, which he did in 1934. Since then he has been with Dayton, Sacramento, Alentown and finally Newark.

CANZONERI HITS LEVY TOO HARD IN NEWARK BOUT

NEWARK, N. J., April 6—(UP)—Former Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri in his first tune-up match for a title bout with Lou Ambers on May 7, scored an impressive victory over George Levy, Trenton, N. J., Italian, last night.

Canzoneri, who deserted his role as "gentleman farmer" on his Marlborough, N. Y., estate for another crack at the title he lost to Ambers last September, was awarded a technical knockout over Levy in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

Tough Tony floored Levy seven times before Referee Whitey Haley stopped the bout.

Canzoneri weighed 138; Levy, 136½.

JIMMY WILSON'S CREW IS READY FOR RETURN HOP

WINTERHAVEN, Fla., April 6.—(UP)—Jimmy Wilson's rejuvenated Phillies break training camp tomorrow after their came with the Rochester Red Wings of the International League.

The Philadelphia Nationals scored their third straight victory yesterday, 6 to 3, over the Cincinnati Reds. Fred Taub, who has reached first base 14 out of the last 19 times at bat, hit two singles and looks like the starting 1937 Philly center fielder.

A magazine writer commenting on the increase in the organization of Fascist groups in various European countries wonders when this will end. That's easy—when they run out of new colors for shirts.

Kaseys Hopeful With Veteran Nine Lined Up

McALLEN, Tex., April 6.—(UP)—Kansas City hasn't won an American Association pennant since 1929, but the club is conceded an excellent chance for the flag this year.

Harrison (Dutch) Zwilling, veteran pilot, is starting his 11th season at the helm of the Blues, and when he gathered his 28 players here for the training drills 15 on the roster were holdovers and 13 newcomers.

Zwilling places his chief hope for a pennant in the ability of the "Big Four" of his 1936 staff—Wiley Moore, Phil Page, Joe Vance and John Niggeling—to repeat or better last year's performances. This quartet won 57 games for third place a year ago.

If all could duplicate, Zwilling believes the additional mound strength he brought in will carry the club to the flag.

Topping the new hurlers are Ted Kleinhaus from the New York Yankees via Newark; Lee Stein from the Cincinnati Reds; Joe Giggs and Beryl Richmond, who gained 26 victories between them for Galveston in the Texas League.

Oglesby Comes Back
Jim Oglesby, whose work in 1935 at Los Angeles merited him an advancement to the Philadelphia Athletics, has shown flashes of his old form in camp here and is counted upon for the first base assignment. Oglesby was on the voluntarily retired list last season.

Herman Schulte, a professional star since the day he stepped off the University of Iowa campus in 1934 will be at second base again. Eddie Marshall or Ray French, both holdovers, will get the call at shortstop, with either Marty Hopkins or a newcomer, Charley English, at third. English hit .302 for Fort Worth a year ago, and has been impressive during the training drills.

Veterans in Outfield
For the outfield, Zwilling has available three of last season's gardeners in George Stumpf, Al Marchand and Milt Bocek.

Chris Hartje, a .314 batsman from Oakland of the Pacific Coast league, virtually has clinched the first-string catcher's job, with Eldon Breese, a holdover, as second choice.

If Kansas City gets the high type of pitching the records indicate it will, the Blues figure to be in the thick of the race.

The club opens at home against Minneapolis.

AMBERS BEATEN IN FIGHT TILT WITH MONTANEZ

NEW YORK, April 6.—(UP)—It was a close fight and the galleries thought Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers had won, but referee and judges unanimously agreed that Pedro Montanez, Puerto Rican, had earned the 10-round decision.

The Herkimer hurricane's title was not on the line because both fighters were over the 135-pound limit last night, but there was little doubt that Lou would still be wearing the crown had the battle gone the 15-round championship distance. Montanez weighed 138½; Ambers 137.

Montanez's powerful body attack piled him up a huge margin in the first half of the fight, but Ambers' strong finish had the Puerto Rican groggy at the final bell. He won the sixth, seventh, eighth and tenth rounds easily and appeared as fresh as the start, while Montanez was both leg and arm weary.

Victory for Pedro was supposed to mean a title bout this summer, but Madison Square Garden Promoter Jimmy Johnston indicated that the flashy islander would have to meet the winner of the May 7 Ambers-Tony Canzoneri championship match in another "over-the-weight" 12-round battle before he would get a title shot.

BAD NEWS HALE CLOUTS TRIPLE TO EDGE GIANTS

TYLER, Tex., April 6.—(UP)—The Cleveland Indians led the New York Giants 4-3 as they met here today for the eighth of their 18 spring exhibition games.

SECOND HAND CAN SHADE

IF A HAND is just on the border line between one which would justify a dealer opening bid and one which does not, it usually can be opened profitably by a player in the second hand position. The reason for this is that, one opponent having shown inability to open, cannot have a powerful hand. With this possibility removed, there remain only the chances that his hand is mediocre or weak, hence the probability that his hand is below average. Such slight indication of weakness by one opponent increases the likelihood of your partner's hand being fairly strong, consequently the prospect of profit from taking action.

cannot open, and fourth hand is on the spot as to where the strength might be concentrated. Those players who believe that in the second hand position a slightly shaded bid may be made, put in a bid of 1-Spade, North a No Trump, South 2-Spades, and when North now bid 3-Spades, four was bid in the South.

A diamond was opened against this contract, and South lost only one spade, one heart and one club, making four spades, which was quite a contrast to the blank board for those who passed the board out.

the sentence was delayed by applause which broke the long silence—"and suffer the most sacred rights of our nation and our people to be ignored and violated. The wrongs against which we array ourselves are no common wrongs; they cut to the very root of human life."

The floors and galleries stood shouting as he concluded. Silken national flags were whipped from breast pockets. Congressmen pressed forwards to shake the president's hand.

Then senate and house debate began. Rarely have their been more dramatic occasions than the 12 hours of discussion in the senate and the 17 hours in the house. The senate approved the war resolution the night of April 4 by a vote of 82 to 6; house passage came at 3 a. m., April 6.

When the clerk reached "Rankin" on the house roll call, the first woman member of congress sat silent. On the second call she rose and in a sobbing voice said: "I want to stand by my country but I cannot vote for war."

One of Few Who Slept

President Wilson was already in bed when the final house vote was taken. Newspaper accounts indicate he was one of the few persons in Washington who slept that night.

As the sun rose that morning, flags were hoisted to the tops of every pole, streets were festooned with allied colors mixed with our own. Horns blew and bells rang out. Little work was done.

Excitement ran high that forenoon. Then, at 12:14 p. m., Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall wrote his name on the declaration alongside that of Speaker of the House Champ Clark. It was hurried down to the White House. President Wilson had been out walking that morning with Mrs.

Wilson. When he returned, the proclamation lay on his desk.

There was no ceremony when he signed it. Mrs. Wilson handed him a pen and at 1:18 p. m., Friday, April 6, 1917, war with Germany became a fact.

"It was a crime," Norris said today referring to U. S. entrance into the conflict. "Absolutely inexcusable. The public was aroused by propaganda emanating from sources which stood to profit and did reap a huge monetary harvest from the war itself."

Would Remove Profits

"Take the profits out of war and you have taken a long step toward insuring peace."

"Propaganda now isn't nearly so bad as it was then. Some time ago I thought another war was inevitable. Now I don't think the prospects are so bad."

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Boy Scout troop No. 158 called its meeting to order at 7:30 p. m. Monday. The roll was called and 35 members were present. Dues collected amounted to $5.05.

Our log cabin at Gold Cliff chateau will be completely finished and "open house" will be held next Sunday. All parents and friends of the troop are invited to attend.

The scoutmaster passed out tickets to sell for the Boy Scout Circus.

We sincerely thank all the Circleville business men and Mr. Cliff Miller for their assistance in making our cabin a possibility.
